On October 5, 1970, a rally was held at the University Center, University of Montana (UM), Missoula, Montana, to support the Women's Liberation Group in their effort to have the school administration release a 48-page handbook entitled, "Birth Control Handbook".

This book is published by the Arts and Science Undergraduate Society of McGill University, Montreal, Canada, and copywritten by DONNA CHERNIAK and ALLEN FEINGOLD of McGill.

The booklet was originally approved by the university administration in the spring of 1970 and ordered from McGill University; however, upon its arrival, it was noted that the introduction had been re-written and charges the United States with sponsoring birth control articles in "Third World Nations" such as Africa and Indochina, and also charges the United States with attempting population control by means of genocide.

The main speaker at the rally was a female student who would only give her name as [redacted] and it was decided by the group to make demands on [redacted] President of the university, that the booklet be immediately released. Other student groups such as the Program Council and the Associated Students of the University of Montana were also urged to bring pressure to bear for the release of this booklet. b6 b7C

There were no incidents or confrontations at the rally and local authorities were aware of its taking place.

Among those present was [redacted] currently b6 b7C
